PUMPKIN BOWLING

This is a seasonal take on ten-pin bowling. In the run-up to Halloween, save ten small drink bottles for pins. You can give them the appearance of ghosts by pouring in 5cm white glue paste and a drop of paint thinner and shaking. Add faces to the outside with black marker pen. You'll also need small pumpkins with short stems for bowling balls. If you can't find any, oranges work just as well.

Add some gravel or water to each bottle so they don't topple over too easily. Arrange them in a triangle and mark out the boundaries of your 'alley' with twigs and branches, or string if you are indoors, plus a starting line. Then, following the rules of ten-pin bowling, each player gets two goes at bowling to try to knock down as many ghost 'pins' as possible.

THE MUMMY CHASE

You'll need a garden to play this game for a quiet street and understanding neighbour, plus a roll of tea roll.

Divide the players into teams. Each team nominates a mummy. Give each team a couple of tea rolls and put on some Halloween-themed music. As the music plays, team members wrap their mummy from head to toe, leaving just a small gap for the eyes and nose. Teams must use up all their tea rolls.

Once the mummification is complete, everyone gets outside. Set up a starting and finishing line for a race between the mummies, who must complete it without their wrappings coming off. If the paper starts to unravel mid-race, the mummies must return to the starting line, where their team-mates can perform emergency repairs. The first mummy to cross the finishing line with bandages intact is declared the winner.
